

GreenSpace encourages park sector participation in Climate Week

GreenSpace is supporting Britain's first Climate Week and encouraging its members to get involved. The charity sent its members information on Climate Week UK with tips and ideas to raise awareness by holding an event, like hosting a meeting about reducing local energy consumption or having a low-carbon lunch at their local park.

Marketing and Communications Manager Kelly Caulfield said, "We are extremely pleased to be supporting Climate Week, a fantastic campaign which is very relevant and close to our hearts. Obviously our parks and green spaces bring many benefits for combating climate change, which is why we are encouraging our vast membership network to get involved."

To support the campaign further, GreenSpace will be producing an executive summary highlighting the benefits that our parks and green spaces bring to combat climate change, which will complement their latest advocacy report, Blue Sky, GreenSpace.

Organisations can have their events promoted in the charity's newsletter by emailing tesss@green-space.org.uk.
